proposed an expansion of the inadequate facilities, including the addition of a lecture hall and new laboratory buildings and upgrading the grounds. The necessary funds came in 1950 from the Carnegie Corporation and the Rockefeller Foundation. But the events in Korea (some things never change) prevented starting the project until August 1951. Vannevar Bush, then director of the Office of Scientific Research and Development that was responsible for science during the Second World War, opened the new lecture hall in late May 1953, just in time for the annual Symposium.
